New Intelligence in Information Management

Information Workers need to work with shared information more than ever. It is crucial to pack essential data and tools into a simple and clear package. A Finnish software company Neoxen Systems pioneers in solving this problem with their new 'out-of-the-box' product.

"Visual Modus 2007 offers an easy and instant view to various sources of information. It seamlessly integrates desktop with information management and collaboration systems, such as Microsoft SharePoint 2007 and Bentley ProjectWise," said Tero Toropainen, Director of Product Management at Neoxen Systems. "Among the first ones we are announcing full compliance with Windows Vista and 2007 Office system. We are proud to release our product together with Microsoft in Ready for a New Day event."

Today Information Workers need to work with shared information more than ever. More and more time and effort is wasted in managing this collaboration network. Customers, subcontractors and other stakeholders need to have a controlled view to the necessary data. To make this even more challenging, each of these roles need their own view, without duplicating data. To increase the work productivity, it is crucial to find ways to pack essential information and tools into a simple and clear package.

Neoxen has solved this challenge with Visual Modus - a role based Unified Workspace. It gathers project information, documents, calendars, processes, tools and back-end systems together to single role based view to serve the users' requirements.

"Keen interest from customers and partners expresses the need for products with innovative approach to tackle the challenges in information management." says Les Postnikoff, Director of Global Sales at Neoxen Systems. "Visual Modus prerelease was warmly welcomed in North America. First evaluations with major customers in Canada are already up and running. More will follow...”

Visual Modus is tested and certified by an independent third party certification laboratory for Windows Vista and Windows XP environments and thus product fulfills demanding international quality standards.
